- 1. Young people want the love, support, encouragement, nurture and attention from their parents.
- 2. Teenagers need "helpful attention" rather than protective attention.
- 3. Helpful attention means that parents should be interested in who the children are and what they are doing.
- 4. Parents try to listen to their children although it is sometimes inconvenient.
- 5. Parents should encourage children to learn from their mistakes rather than show them how to do it.
- 6. Teenagers would like to be on their mobile phones or computer, playing games and/or communicating with their friends.
- 7. They also want to spend time together with their parents.
- 8. They spend time sitting around the table to have dinner, watching TV as a family or going out with the parents.
- 9. Teenagers tend to make their own decisions although they don't have much experience.
- 10. Parents should share experience with their children so that they don't make wrong decisions.

Ex 4:

Sample:

I live in a family of four: my parents, my younger sister and I. We are all busy people: both my parents work, my sister and I spend most of our times at school, so we split the household chores equally.

My dad is responsible for mending things around the house. He also cleans the bathroom twice a week. My mum does most of the cooking and grocery shopping.

Being the elder child in the family, I take up a large share of housework. I do the laundry, take out the rubbish, and clean the fridge once a week. My younger sister An's responsibilities include helping Mum to prepare meals and washing the dishes. My sister and I take turns laying table for meals, sweeping the house, and feeding the cat. We do our share of housework willingly as we know that if everyone contributes, the burden is less and everyone can have some time to relax.
